

ABSTRACT

A gallium nitride-based semiconductor device has a p-type layer that is a gallium nitride compound semiconductor layer containing a p-type impurity and exhibiting p-type 5 conduction. The p-type layer includes a top portion and an inner portion located under the top portion. The inner portion contains the p-type impurity element and, in combination therewith, hydrogen.